

Bauhaus and its significance

The Bauhaus school was grounded by the architect Walter Gropius in Weimer in 1919. The main idea of the Bauhaus rests on interaction of design, modern industry and the latest scientific findings. All design disciplines were joined to this new concept. This was a trailblazing idea for then designing yet it is of current interest to the present day. The adopter of this fundamental idea is DAVINCI HOUSE.

Thanks to the bearing timber skeleton construction, we could abandon supporting walls so that the ground plan can be shaped in accordance with your personal desires. Thus DAVINCI HOUSE carries on the tradition of the Bauhaus as a trendsetter for the modern architecture.
